

Entangled Insights Quick Guide

The Entangled Insights function is an incredible way to get more information about the causal chain. The causal chain is a way that the client unfolds their story. We see this in terms of reactive items (items that test around 98-100% in this case). We identify reactive items and the more specific the better. In this way, we want to compare one item to another. For example, if we take the frequency “Immune” into the EI (Entangled Insights), we are looking for ways to find out more about issues that are causing the immune system to have reactivity. Areas that you would be likely to find meaningful information would be:

- Bacteria (all)
- Virus (all)
- Fungus (all)
- Parasites (all)

Here is the complete listing of all the groups that exist within EI. You can also choose to only do the “All” function. I have found that the all function can result in some extraneous information, things that simply don’t make too much sense in relation to the case. These items should be ignored for now. However, when there are items that are reasonable and have a score of 98%-100%, then include these items into the Main Hold tray for further investigation in Progressive Insights. Here are all the groupings in the EI:
