

Genius New Egg Aura Guide

The new Genius aura analysis is rich with colors and meaning. It is a fascinating look at the biofield through the aura. There is definitely a way to make the most of this new aura system. Your clients will be fascinated by the deep and varied colors as well as the aura layers. Let's look at some basic concepts about the analysis of the auras in this system.

Basic concepts

In this aura analysis, we are looking for the transformation from one aura (typically taken at the beginning of the session) to a progressed aura (these are taken after running a series of frequencies for 1 minute or more).

Beginning auras

Often in a beginning aura, we see rings that have black, gray or brown around the edges. These colors indicate stagnation, pain, blocked emotions or other issues that often will be beneficial to clear from the biofield. By testing different panels and choosing the red and blue items, this should help to clear these energies. The gray rings around the edges of this beginning aura are very typical. We can also see leaking energy in the poorly defined edges at the top of the "egg".

Mixed color ring

You may see rings that are not completely filled in with one color. Or you could see rings that are fuzzy or not very well defined. These all have meaning. In the example below, the color that should fill the middle is a bright green, but it is not completely filled in.

Leaking Energy: Missing defined boundary of ring

Do you see how the orange, yellow and purple rings are defined clearly, except at the top? In this case, there is a leaking of energy from the biofield. When someone is upset with another person, worried about a loved one or even simply "stuck" in a negative and draining cycle, this will cause an energetic loss from the field, sometimes referred to as leaking energy.

To assist a person like this, consider running frequencies like the Bach Flower Essences, emotions or Solfeggio frequencies. The Kidney Meridian could also be a good selection to help to build up the person's kidney yin reserves.

What color is in the center?

The color in the center is the main issue the person is addressing during that session. The color will be related to the chakra as well as emotions, physical blocks that may be connected to the chakra. This can inform the libraries that you may choose to work on during the session.

In this case, the main issue is in the spiritual realm and related to the 7th chakra. The spirit is very strong and open, but is presenting itself as the main theme or focus for the case. The brown ring around the outside is very typical of what we see at the beginning of a session. You are looking for this to be cleared. The brown ring most likely represents held emotions that are ready to be released.

Comparing shades of colors:

In the example below, the ring is also pink. However, it is a very different shade. This one is more muted and not as vibrant. This can indicate a weaker vital force or some blockage in the 7th chakra. The ring around it is quite bright and could indicate a potential opening in the 7th chakra. For this case, we would focus on Solfeggio frequencies, Essential Oils and affirmations as a way to continue the spiritual expansion and bring up the vibratory force.

Auras that appear after balancing frequencies have been entrained (this means they were run for the client)

The transformed aura, or the "after" aura should show a clearing out of the gray, black or brown rings. You should generally see more vibrant colors. The typical colors seen in the after auras are blue, purple and pink but other colors may be seen as well. Here is a typical ending aura.

Summary

The auras shown in the new Genius aura function are exciting! This is an initial guide but we will continue to add to this guide in order to better explain all the details of the aura function. See the aura colors guide for additional information regarding colors in the aura scans.
